Millionaires went through for four goals, while Seattle floundered in a sea of mystification. The "Vancouver Spread," as the new play of the Millionaires has been termed was entirely too much for them. The Millionaires went through the entire sixty minutes without a substitution and never let up once, although Seattle finally got going in the second period and gave Vancouver a good battle from then on. Only two penalties were handed out, the Vancouver men being sufferers in both cases. Few offsides were called.

MONS STAR HAS BEEN RECEIVED BY WIDOW

On Friday, Mrs. Notley, of this city, received from the British Admiralty the Mons Star, awarded to her late husband, Sergeant J. L. Notley, of the Royal Marines, who was killed in action in France on September 15, 1917, while serving a 15-inch naval gun. The late Mr. Notley, who had formerly served in the Marines, and had completed his reserve period, left Kamloops, 1914, the first man to leave the city for war service, and rejoined the Royal Marine Artillery in England, serving for three years before he fell while operating a gun which he had helped to build in the early days of the war.
